- Diagnose hearing disorders and develop individualized treatment recommendations.
- Perform hearing aid evaluations, fittings, verification, validation, and follow-up care.
- Counsel patients and families regarding hearing loss, communication strategies, amplification options, and hearing conservation.
- Prepare clinical reports and maintain accurate documentation in accordance with professional and regulatory standards.
- Collaborate with physicians, speech-language pathologists, educators, and other healthcare professionals.
- Participate in quality improvement initiatives and continuing education activities.

Qualifications

- Master's or Doctoral degree in Audiology from an accredited program.
- Registered and in good standing with CASLPO
- Experience working with pediatric and infant populations is an asset, but not mandatory
- Strong diagnostic and hearing aid dispensing skills.
- Excellent communication, interpersonal, and organizational abilities.
- Ability to work independently and as part of a multidisciplinary team.

What We Offer

- Competitive salary commensurate with experience.
- Comprehensive health and dental benefits.
- Paid professional development and continuing education opportunities.
- Professional membership and licensing support.
- Supportive team environment with mentorship opportunities.
- Modern diagnostic and hearing aid technology.
- Work-life balance and a collaborative clinic culture.
